OUR VILLAGE STORES. Messre. Bland & Butler have resupplied their shelves for the winter, as will be seen by their card. It is needless to speak of the taste and excellence of this house, here, where it has been so long and favorably known. Broadway cannot buast a man of more taste than Burnen; and Blann is but another rendering of "A No. 1," in overy respect.

Mr. EDMUND PENN has also a very full and a very beautiful stock of goods. The old man has tried himself this season, and beat himself too. His many friends and patrons cannot fail to be delighted with his fall exposition, especially when shown up, as it is, by the most obliging and politest of clerks.

a sad accident occurred there on Saturday last, the 30th ult. A youth about seventeen years old, by the name of Thomas Smiley, whilst at work on the new bridge of the South Carolina Rail Road, fell into the River and was drowned. His body had not been found on Monday morning. A FINE OPENING.

Attention is asked to the notice of the Trustees of the Edgefield Male Academy. We hesitate not to say, that for an efficient teacher here is one of the finest openings in the State. Will the Carolinian, in copying advertisement, please give it a brief editorial notice. For a first rate teacher (we want no other) liberal arrangements will be made.

It is perhaps due to Mr. Nickerson, P. M. at Big Crock, in this District, to state that a letter which he some time since forwarded to us containing $10 and which we supposed lost, and of which we had spoken to some of our Big Creek friends was recoived in due time at this Office, but through the neglect of our " Devil" was misplaced for near two weeks. Mr. N: is a prompt and an attentive Post Master, and we return him our thanks for various favors.

OLD HAMBURG.

At the risk of re-arousing the "Newberry Vindictives," we will say "old Hamburg;" and we will moreover say, "hurrah for old Hamburg," But it is been never so large as at present. Business men are not the "Vindictives" we are after this time: It is driving a good season in almost all the departments the Winnsboro Register, who has been twitting old of trade. In consequence, there is a look of Hamburg in connection with her late fire; says he vivacity about the whole place. The limits of busidid not think there was $5,000 in the burgh, to be ness are daily extending up and down Broad Street, lost; and adds an expression of wonder, as to how on the cross streets also, and on the street parallel to

Down Broad Street, opposite the Augusta philosophy. There are perhaps no "spetted mice" for an editor to show up to an admiring constituency, -such as the one Mr. SMART showed to you, and which was caught-(miserabile dictu)-by so sublunary an artifice as "a common wire mouse-trap." But there is a set of the best cotton-buyers there in all these Southern States of ours, who give the best of prices, and could supply South Carolina, if need be, with the best of planter's goods of all descriptions, and of groceries, liquors &c, &c., all which it would be entirely too tedious to enumerate. Yes, brother Register, we repeat it because we know it;-they are the best cotton-buyers in the South. They were giving 111 the other day when your redoubtable Winnsboro buyers, according to your own account, could only squeeze out 10% for the choicest article; And the week your men succeeded in buying, 182 bales, ours bought more than a thousand. That ought to be talk enough to settle the question. And this is jewelry, and the drug houses,-the music stores, and the course of affairs all the winter, and every winter, with us. We respectfully defy you, brother Register, to beat HAMBURG with Winnsboro,-we had almost said you might throw in Cotton-town of Columbia. But this would perhaps be going a little too far. Cortain it is though, that Winnsboro' can't come it, with all the Cotton-buyers and spotted mice she can pro-

EDGEFIELD HATS. Messrs. Wooler & Son, residing between Granite ville village and the Graniteville Depot, have established a but-making business which deserves honorable mention. They exhibited specimens of their work at our late District Fair, which readily took a premium Their hats of all kinds commanded general admiration. Having procured one for our own caput, we can speak advisedly upon the subject. Mr. Wooler's ane dress hats are of superior quality; and, though very taking at first sight, they decidedly improve on acquaintance. The one we now wear is a capital hat, and we like it botter and better every day. General McGowan, of Abbeville, wore off one from his last visit down this way, and we have no doubt he is delighted with it. All who have tried them, like them. An experienced dealer in the article examined ours the other day, and, not knowing it was of Edgefield manufacture, frankly gave the opinion that it was a If as the world goes these things must be, why in all first rate bat. This is the candid expression of one who trades with the best houses of New York. Mr. Wootey not only makes fine hats but common ones. -not only men's hats but boy's hats,-plantation hats and business hats .- young America's hats and Senators' hats. We wish him much good luck in his business. He ought to be encouraged in his handapme and useful branch of manufactures. Mr. Wooley, we had almost forgot to say, took the premium at the last Charleston Fair, and we confidently predict that he will do so at the approaching Columbia Fair. Why? Because his work is good, and no mistake. Under the circumstances, should not Mr. Wooler be encouraged, especially by the people of Edgefield | both at table and elsewhere, is prompt and satisfactoamong whom he has cast his lot? Surely he should. Send down then to him at Graniteville; -send your measures and order your hats. Try him, merchants. Try him, planters. Try him, all of you. His enterprize is a good one. His work is good. His prices are fair. His hats are both fine and comfortable Try him once, and we venture to say you will try him again.

AUGUSTA ;--HER FALL TRADE, &C. Having spent a day or two of the past week in this may little city, we note briefly a few facts and re-before it will be both improper and incorrect to speak of Augusta as a "little city." Indeed it is by some considered wrong to do so now. A city with more than twenty thousand inhabitants is no insignificant place even in the old countries : and here at the South, where towns in general grow slowly, it must be allowed to take a rank of decided respectability. Au-GUSTA'S growth has been so rapid of late years as to orm an exception to the rule of progress among our outhern cities. The geography-makers have not een able to keep up with her increasing numbers. The very latest of them, of 1857, report her as having a population of 15,000; whereas it is thought, and ne of her most prominent and accurately-informed citizens so remarked to us the other day, that 22,000 would scarcely be above the mark. This increase ontinues to advance daily; and should it not be retarded by any future counteracting cause, Augusta will become in less than twenty years one of the most populous and important cities of the South. The railroads which converge, in her bosom as it were have been the principal influences in unfolding her capabilities. There is no reason that these influences should not become more potent as the country besomes richer. A single other road though ought to he built, to insure the city's prosperity. We mean one to load out through the heart of Edgefield and Newberry districts on the South Carolina side, in the direction of Winnsboro or Chester. Such a road would effectually secure to Augusta almost the entire trade of not only Edgefield and Newberry, but also of Abbeville, Anderson, Pickens, Greenville, Laurens, Bravoy's clothing store is an attractive place to one Union and Spartanburg districts; and it would probably also draw a large portion of the trade of Fairfield, York and the other Northern districts of our State. our old friend and follow-citizen, John Lyon, to Wasay, if the people of Augusta desire to clinch the tell the people about his fine stock and to strike nail of their prosperity, this is the road for them to every man's taste centrally. Lvox always could do build. They would also receive by its instrumentality their full proportion of any trade that may hereafter be brought on by the Rabun Gap route; and quite as effectually too as they could have done by the lately contemplated road up the Savannah Valley. The men of Augusta are both sagacious and bold in their enterprizes, and it will be matter of surprise if they continue much longer to overlook the advantages within their grasp which we have barely indicated. It is no vision of fancy to which we would call their attention, but a reality that would tend as much as any other menns that can be named to make their boautiful town the Cincinnati of the South. Do this, and the perchants of Charleston would not be slow in establishing their wholesale houses in your midst. There is already some temptation for them to do this. Increase that temptation by increasing the links of your already varied advantages, and you will have them certain. What then might not Augusta aspire to among the cities of the South. Those extensive ommons of hers, so superbly adapted for the purpoes of a great city,-would then be speedily converted into squares of industry and wealth, and many a magnificent block would arise where to-day the cows are grazing in undisturbed freedom. Surely nature ntended those commons for a considerable purpose Destiny is now almost pointing her finger at them as a spot to be called into requisition in the economy of and doing, nor suffer the present day to pass unimproved. They are already known for their energy, fortune. They should strike while the iron is hot. diem, and Augusta will yet be, what all who are convenient to her most earnestly hope she will be, the great inland city of the South.

3. The season of theatrical amusements has not yet opened in Augusta. But a good one is anticipated under the management of Mr. MARCHANT. His company will be there about the 20th inst. An English Opera Troupe will supply a portion of the winter's amusement; and among the stars of the legitimate drama, Miss Eliza Logan is announced. It is probable, as we learned, that an experiment will be made toon our Edgefield boards by a portion of Mr. MAR-

CHANT'S company during Christmas. We imagine that many of our citizens would relish a few good enertainments about that time, especially if Miss LOGAN is to be one of the party. In Augusta the drama is poorly sustained. Those who lead the ton never turn out except at a representation that is really recherche; and then there is a large religious class who never visit such places. We scarcely know whether they are right or wrong in this. Each one's conscience is his own bost monitor in such cases. Augusta is certainly far more a city of churches than of theatres and balls; and doubtless the customary order and sobriety of the place are attributable to this happy fact.

Yet this remark is not made in enmity to the Drama.

CHARLESTON CORRESPONDENCE

THE EDGEFILD PLANK ROAD.

It is not our present purpose to east censure up the managers of this road. True, it is for the both of these ends. And we think the indications point to this conclusion. A limited number of hands

oad. Their progress is something less than a hundred yards a day under the most favorable circumstances. Yet even this is something doing in the right lirection. We trust it is but the harbinger of largely ncreased operations at an early day. If the company could but find themselves able to renew as much as two miles of the road per month, it would be an event to be rejoiced at by all of us. Can it not be so?

We appeal to Mr. Cunny, the able and esteemed president of the road, and ask lim, in behalf of an anxious public, if it will not be possible to increase his working force to this extent within the next six months? It does seem to us that the true policy of the Company, now, is to devote all their profits to the reconstruction of the road. If the people could have eason to believe that this were done, we can but think that they would be satisfied, and, more than this, that they would determine, all of them, to help the Company on with all their custom at even an increase on the present rates of toll. Certainly every reflecting and good citizen would do this. All are fully aware, who are aware of any thing at all, that this Plank Road is a thing of the highest utility. If each one will think over the matter, he will assuredly come to the conclusion that the change back to the old sandy road of past days would be a serious misfortune to our District. Let then the Company show that they are in earnest for the speedy re-building of their road; let them make this clear to the people by some such ectual increase of labor as will justify the expectation that in a year or two all will be right again; and it may be depended upon, we think, that every planter, and furmer, and wagoner, and traveller, in the District, will come to the rescue with a spirit of liberal incouragement. The indications then, we repeat, seem to be, that such is the company's intention. It eally cheered us the other day to trot over a few nundred yards of new road. It makes every one feel glad to see even these little beginnings of the right kind of repairs. Can we not hope that they will be nerensed? When Mr. Cunny shall have saved this ond to the District, he will be entitled to the proud position of a public benefactor. Our belief is, that ne intends to do so. Let us all then lend a helping hand. With you ask, how? The answer is, by fostering the effort with our patronage unfailingly.

It is needless to say what we mean by this. Every one understands us. Lot the people all do their part, and we are persuaded that the Company and the Company's president will do theirs. Thus will the road be renewed. Otherwise, it must eventually fall into ruin. Let it fall, and we will regret, too late, advan-

us to judge them leaiently,

CHARLESTON, October 29th, 1858. .The frequent and increasing depredations on Mail 2. The Fall Trade of Augusta appears to have Routes from this City to the Southward, have excited so general complaint as to attract the attention of the Post Office authorities. On Friday last, a letter was addressed to the District Attorney informing him that the writer had a few days before met the mail rider on the Jacksonboro road, and after passing him a quarter of a mile, he found a letter lying in the road, postmarked, opened and apparently dropped. Further information of rubborles between Adam's Run and or four hundred per cont in the last two or three Charleston having been communicated to the District Attorney, he took measures for the arrest of Hotel, and indeed on both sides, the improvements Wm. A negro-boy, 17 years of age, was arrested and placed in the Guard House last week, suspected of having been concerned in some of the incendiary work lately going on in the Upper Ward. He managed to escape from his imprisonment, but was pursued and discovered at his owners premises, corner of King and Queen Streets. On being a second time detected, he sprang from an upper window and escaped. Again the Police were after him, and found him near the Line Street Rail Road Depot, in female dress. The account he gives of his escape from the Guard House is, that he succeeded in getting out of the cell when the door was opened, crept stealthily into the yard of the Captain of Police, went into his Kitchen for a drink of water, and slipped quietly out into the Street, saluting the ladies of the house as he passed by the door.
